The figure displays a memory layout visualization. At the top, there's a horizontal bar divided into segments of red, white, and grey. Below this bar are five groups of grids. Each group contains a 4x4 grid of squares. Some squares are filled with different shades of grey or black, indicating selected or active memory chunks. The first group shows a mix of red, white, and grey segments. The second group shows a mix of white and grey segments. The third group shows a mix of white and grey segments. The fourth group shows a mix of white and grey segments. The fifth group shows a mix of white and grey segments.
